In financial markets, high-frequency trading (HFT) is a type of algorithmic trading characterized by high speeds, high turnover rates, and high order-to-trade ratios that leverages high-frequency financial data and electronic trading tools. While there is no single definition of HFT, among its key attributes are highly sophisticated algorithms, co-location, and very short-term investment horizons.

Algorithmic trading is a method of executing a large order (too large to fill all at once) using automated pre-programmed trading instructions accounting for variables such as time, price, and volume to send small slices of the order (child orders) out to the market over time. They were developed so that traders do not need to constantly watch a stock and repeatedly send those slices out manually.

Clinging to chart or candlestick patterns & trends for 'confirmation' — but it's really hit and miss. Because you're only making decisions based on time periods of your chart, waiting around for patterns like Bat Wing, Engulfing, Harami, Dark Cloud Cover, Doji, Morning Star, etc. to develop is costing you time and opportunity while the big boys feast on intel you don't have.
