1.. Introduction Alzheimer's disease (AD) is the most common form of dementia and affects millions of people worldwide. The disorder is characterized by severe memory loss, with episodic memory being particularly impaired during the initial phases.

Mitochondrial dysfunction is a trigger of Alzheimer's

RNA interference (RNAi) is a natural cellular process that silences gene expression. It is mediated by small interfering RNA (siRNA) and microRNA (miRNA). miRNAs are small non-coding RNA molecules that regulate gene expression post-transcriptionally. RNAi is a powerful tool for studying gene function and has potential applications in medicine and agriculture.

RNA interference in Alzheimer's disease

PET has become an established method for medical research and clinical routine diagnostics. Development and availability of new radiopharmaceuticals specific for particular diseases is one of the driving forces of the expansion of clinical nuclear medicine providing early personalized diagnosis and efficient therapy.
